

Based on the fermentor disinfection process and route design, the system enables automatic and precise control of key processes including vessel emptying, jacket emptying, preheating, temperature ramp-up, pressure holding, timing, aeration, and cooling during sterilization. This ensures sterility, reduces steam consumption and manual intervention, provides a reliable environment for microbial fermentation, and achieves energy conservation.

Energy saving and steam consumption